improve information for people affected by cancer?

What is NICaN?

The Northern Ireland Cancer Network (NICaN) brings together individuals and organisations involved in cancer services across Northern Ireland, to plan, develop and improve cancer services.

NICaN is keen to ensure that the perspective of patients, family and carers is represented in this work. This enables us to ensure that the issues important to patients, their families and carers are at the centre of what we do.

One aspect in which we wish to involve patients and the public is in ensuring that written information for people affected by cancer is easy to read and understand.

You can help us with this by joining our readers panel.

What is the Readers Panel?

NICaN and organisations working with NICaN produce written material for patients, family and carers. It is important that this information is clear and easily understood.

The Readers panel is made up of patients and members of the public who agree to read information written for patients and the public before it is published. This ensures that the information is clearly presented, easy to read, and is helpful and informative.

How does it work?

As a member of the Readers Panel you will be sent information such as leaflets or booklets or material for websites. You will be asked to read the documents and will feedback your views on different aspects of the material via a questionnaire.

How do I join?

Joining our Readers Panel is simple.

Just complete the short form below and return to the address overleaf, or email nican.office@hscni.net
